

Copyright Guidelines

We may do the following:

- Install one copy of the software onto our computer hard drive.
- Adapt software to another language as long as it is not available in that language.
- Add features to the software that will help us to better use it.
- Make one archival or backup copy of the software. If the software is copy-protected, we may use utility software to unlock and copy it.

We may not do the following without the permission of the copyright owner:

- Put single-user software on a network.
- Make multiple copies of software for ourselves.
- Make multiple copies of software to give away, loan, lease, sell, or transmit to others.
- Sell our adaptation of the software.
